SATURDAY, APRIL S, 1865

The Battle on Thursday. That brilliant and indomitable hero Sharidan, who has long been recognized as the best of our cavalry generals, and whose victory of Five Forks, on Saturday last, established his claim to preeminence as an infantry tactician, has added fresh Isurels to his fame by another magnificent battle. He met the enemy near Burksville on Thursday, and, having interceptad their advance, forced them to a stand, and attacked them with two divisions of the Sixth corps and the cavalry, and, when last heard from, "was still pressing on with both cavalry and artillery." The results of the battle, thus far, as they are modestly "national symbols" that were hoisted over and briefly summed up by Sheridan, are Bichmond were "two light and tasteful the capture of three Major Generals, num- gridirons, from Companies E and H, of the berless Brigadiers, several thousand prisoners, artillery, die, &c. The battle was still "gridiron" can be a "national symbol" it has been intercepted, and turned back in pan into the fire." The Herald man prob rout, its unity can never be preserved or ably wrote the word 'guidon." restored. The fact that Sheridan has so essily captured so large a number of officers and prisoners, shows that the spirit of Lee's army has been entirely broken by the loss of their capital. It is no longer an army, it is a mob-without unity, without organization, without esprit du corps, with no purpose but immediate flight and the preservation of personal safety. Sheridan's victory of Thursday has intensified this condition of affairs. Let it be "pressed," as Sheridan expresses it, and the whole rebel force will tumble to nieces.

The report that Lee had surrendered was received yesterday with general discredit, as all news is for which we do not get a voucher in Stanton's official bulletins. It has been denied, and apparently was merely an outgrowth of the official announcement of Sheridan's victory. It is, however, only a little premature. Cut off from retreat, attacked on all sides by forces hourly increasing in size and confifeat, Lee will be forced to a speedy surrender, unless he wishes to see his whole command disperse and vanish like mists at without enough men for a body guard.

This gallant officer, who was dangerous ly and it is feared mortally wounded on Sunday last, was a son of Bi hop Potter, of Pennsylvania. At the outbreak of the war he was a lawyer, with, for a young man, a large practice. He left New York as Lieutenant Colonel of the Fifty-first regiment New York volunteers, and saw his first service under Burnside in North Carolins. He rapidly won his promotion to the colonelcy of his regiment, then to the single star, and next to the double stars. For two years past he has served in the Ninth corps, following its varied fortunes from the Potomsc to the Cumberland, everywhere doing his duty modest ly, faithfully, bravely.

THE SUBSENDER OF RICHMOND. On the instant General Weitzel, so clear was his mind upon this subject, despatched Major A. H. Stevens, of the Fourth Massa-chusetts cavalry, and Major E. E. Graves, of his staff, with forty cavalry, to investi-gate the condition of affairs on the roads leading to the rabal works and thence to Richmond. This party had scarcely proceeded far within the rebel lines when they espied a shabby carriage approaching, the driver waving a white flag. Approaching this vehicle, it was found to contain Mayor Mayo, the head of the Richmond city government; Judge Meredith, of the Superior Court of Richmond; Judge Lyon, and several other worthies of the rebel persussion, who announced that they had come out to surrender the city to the competent authority. This took place within a distance of two miles from the city, after the Union Majors had found their way through several lines of torpedoes, and was marked by the following onversation:-

Wasn't that peace growing out of war? Even so shall the beautiful and graceful ever grow out of the horrid and terrible things that transpire in this changing but ever advancing world.
